Trump impeachment probe goes public as political drama mounts

Lawmakers launch their first televised public hearings on Wednesday

PATRICIA ZENGERLE & MATT SPETALNICK WASHINGTON, November 13

THE IMPEACHMENT INQUIRY INTO US President Donald Trump will reach a critical juncture on Wednesday when lawmakers launch their first televised public hearings...

Democrats leading the US House of Representatives probe have summoned three US diplomats - all of whom have previously expressed alarm in closed-door testimony...

impeachment probe. With a potential television audience of tens of millions looking on, two witnesses - William Taylor, top US diplomat in Ukraine, and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State George Kent - will be sworn in before the House Intelligence Committee on Wednesday.

Lawmakers leading the probe released transcripts of closed-door testimony last week showing that Taylor believed a White House-led effort to pressure Kiev to investigate Ukrainian energy company Burisma was motivated by a desire to help Trump win re-election next year.

Taylor testified he had been concerned to learn that security aid to Ukraine, as well as a White House meeting between Trump and Zelenskiy, had been delayed for political reasons.

Kent said he had been alarmed by efforts by Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, and others to pressure Ukraine. He said Giuliani - who Democrats have accused of conducting a shadow foreign policy effort in Ukraine - had conducted a campaign full of lies against Marie Yovanovitch, who was abruptly pulled from her post as US ambassador to Ukraine in May. She will give public testimony on Friday.

President Trump steps up anti-impeachment FB ads

PRESIDENT DONALD Trump's re-election campaign is ramping up a Facebook ad campaign against efforts to impeach him, buying more ads on the topic in recent weeks than all the Democratic White House candidates combined.

polls show support for impeachment is concentrated among Democrats. Last Friday alone, the president sent out more than 400 Facebook ads asking for donations that will be rewarded with a personalised 'Impeachment Defense Membership Card'.

FB sued for 'censoring' posts naming the Trump whistleblower

Congressional investigators have kept the whistleblower's name secret, voicing concerns about the person's safety if it was made public

PETER BLUMBERG
San Francisco, November 13

CONNECTICUT law school student Cameron Atkinson says he wanted to test whether the social network was blocking posts that mentioned the identity ascribed to the whistleblower by conservative media outlets. So he called the whistleblower a 'hero' in one post and a 'dirty rat' in another — and said in a third post that he has 'conflicting thoughts' about naming the person publicly. All three posts were removed within hours, according to the complaint filed on Tuesday in federal court. Congressional investigators have kept the whistleblower's name secret, voicing concerns about the person's safety if it was made public. Mainstream media organisations have cited the same rationale for not publicizing the person's identity. "Any mention of the potential whistleblower's name violates our coordinating harm policy, which prohibits content 'outing of witness, informant, or activist,'" Facebook said in a statement.

"We are removing any and all mentions of the potential whistleblower's name and will revisit this decision should their name be widely published in the media or used by public figures in debate." Atkinson claims Facebook chief executive Mark Zuckerberg 'harbours political ambitions' and his censorship of concerned citizens 'is intentional and is inspired by ill-will, malice, and a desire to deflect attention from himself and Facebook's practice of surreptitiously mining data for profit from consumers who believe they are receiving a free service devoted primarily to their welfare.'
